DETAILED ACTION

Specification

The title of the invention is not descriptive. A new title is required that is clearly indicative of the invention to which the claims are directed.

The following title is suggested: the title should be amended to reflect use of a friction reducer on the contacts of the device.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

Claims 1,2,6 and 7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the admitted prior art on page 1 in the instant disclosure or Lang et al 6,320,268, in view of Japanese Abstract 102,400'. The admitted prior art and the Lang et al patent both teach a diode device with a casing, having leads connected to the diode device, as claimed. These references do not teach use of friction reducer or a coating on the leads connected to the diode, for increasing the contact efficiency. The Japanese abstract, Jp, clearly teaches the same as conventional, Teaching use of a metal conductive powder applied to the contact electrode surfaces of the device, see the abstract and elements 5a and 5b. Use of the same leads to reduced resistance and thermal resistance in the contact structure and in view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify either the admitted prior art or the Lang et al system, with a metal powder coating between the contact structures of the device, to increase the resistance to thermal and resistive parameters. As per claim 2 these powder materials do comprise micro particles, as broadly claimed. As per claim 7 note use of threads on the admitted prior art casing, as claimed.

Claims 3-5 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over the admitted prior art or Lang et al, in view of Jp 102,400 as applied to claims 1,2,6,7 above, and further in view of Eriksson 3,581,163

Both Lang et al and the admitted prior art teach the claimed subject matter except for showing use of particular materials for the contacts, such as gold. However, the patent to Lang et al is applied for clearly teaching use of gold to coat surface contacts in electrical devices, as claimed. See paragraph 9 in the detailed disclosure. In view of this teaching it would have been obvious to modify the admitted prior art or the Lang et al system further to include gold as the contact material, to enhance the resistive and thermal contacts of the contacts.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure. Yamazaki et al is cited for disclosing a pertinent contact structure of interest to the disclosed invention.
